

- * it is a behavioural pattern that allows a request to pass through a chain of handlers. Each handler decides either to process the request or pass it along the next handler in the chain.
- Handler Interface: declares a method to handle requests and holds a reference to the next handler.
- Concrete Handler: implements the handler interface and processes the request or forwards it.
- Client: initiates the request and sets up the chain.